Browse Journal by Discipline

Sage has a great feature that allows a person to search by a specific discipline.

- On the top of the home page select Browse Journals by Discipline to view the drop down (pictured to the right)
- If the discipline is not in these categories click Explore Discipline Hubs at the bottom of the drop down.
  - This has the categories already laid out for your searching ease.

Humanities & Social Sciences    Science, Technology, Medicine

- Choose your division then select the discipline from within.
- Once a discipline is selected you can search within the discipline's subjects.

Article Features: Figures & Tables

This feature allows you to find the data and the tables used within the article.

- At the top of the article find the tabs that say “Figures and tables.”
- In the figures and tables tab, you have the option to click open in viewer where you can then magnify, download or share the graph.

Why is using a data set convenient?

- The data and tables help prove an argument.
  - They provide proof.
  - Can be added to a presentation.

Cool Feature

Did you find a great article for your research topic? Well, you can access similar articles for your research! How? On the article page, locate:

- Similar articles: A list of related articles are available. Users can click “show more details” to view year and the publication.
